The distance of the route is given from North to South, but they may be skied in the reverse direction.

The places at which it is mentioned the trails may be broken, are places at which it is possible to obtain repairs, or even a conveyance to return to the starting point or connect with another outfit, or if desired stop at the spot.

Most of the trails shown in red lines on the map were originally well marked and skied out, but it may be found that some have not been maintained in perfect order. However, with the guidance of the map and the employment of good equipment and reasonable care, trail skiers should have no difficulty in enjoying the great sport and treading their way over the Laurentians in unbroken tracks. Never ski cross-country alone. It is great fun with company.
